

NEW YORK

Theta Kappa, SUNY Albany

Sisters came up with a fun and tasty way to promote our philanthropic partner: Scoops For a Cure. While selling ice cream on campus, Sisters raised awareness and more than $1,000 for Autism Speaks.—Jacqueline DeVito, jacqueline.devito@gmail.com

NORTH CAROLINA

Gamma Phi, East Carolina University

Sisters raised money and awareness for Autism Speaks by teaming up with the men of Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity to hold a Jail 'n' Bail outside the student center. Many students volunteered to be "arrested" and had a blast socializing, snacking and dancing with Sisters while they waited for friends to post bail. Professors also got into the spirit by pledging money and their time at the event. All told, $1,500 was raised and a new tradition in fundraising was created.—Sarah Francis, sef0701@ecu.edu

Epsilon Gamma, Western Carolina University

For just $5, guests could eat as much as they wanted during Epsilon Gamma's pancake fundraiser, which raised $350.—Samantha Major, samajor1@catamount.wcu.edu

TEXAS

Beta Alpha, University of Texas at Austin

Sisters baked puzzle-shaped cookies, wrote autism facts on the cookies and gave them to members of the Greek community to increase autism awareness. The chapter also hosted Taco Xi, an all-you-can-eat breakfast taco benefit, and raised $1,000.—Ashley Zalta, ashleyzalta08@comcast.net

WASHINGTON

Epsilon Zeta, Eastern Washington University

Sisters participated in the Responding to Autism Fun Run in Kennewick in April. The run was held in conjunction with the grand opening of the Responding to Autism Center that supports families with children diagnosed with autism spectrum disorders in southeast Washington.—Shelby Krebs, shelby@beefnw.com

North Carolina Asheville | Sisters shared information about autism and Alpha Xi Delta's partnership during UNCA's Change the World Day on March 31.—Heather Driver, hrdriver@unca.edu

Marietta | The chapter held its annual Dunk A Fuzzie fundraiser and raised more than $200 for Autism Speaks.

Albion | Student organizations at Albion show their colors by painting the rock in the center of campus. In April, Phi Chapter got its turn.—Rebecca McMurray, rmm11@albion.edu
